

STOCKMANSHIP

by Steve Cote

On-the-range experiences in solving livestock handling problems.

Contains the basics of a method for creating:

- herds that stay together, drive easily and stay mothered up.
- cattle that can be sorted readily, even on rough range without facilities.
- cattle that will want to stay where you put them for a day or more, without fences.
- stock that will even leave the location, water and return promptly back.

Riparian areas can thus be readily protected and enhanced, without fencing.

Over-grazing and over-resting are readily controlled along with most livestock health problems.

Includes principles, techniques and tips for handling large herds through even complex grazing plans.
